

Snooker Blog – 2nd November 2023

Alex Rose at the table at the East India Club

On 19th October, Roehampton Club beat the Lansdowne Club 4-2 in the final of the London Clubs Snooker Competition. This is the third time we have won the competition, which features a number of London clubs, organised and hosted by the East India Club.

All frames were very close, but we just won the final frame of doubles on the pink after a grueling frame that had everyone desperate to go to dinner.

A number of Roehampton Club players are also competing in the singles events. Good luck to them.

I was lucky enough to win the final of the Roehampton Shield – the Summer Handicap Knockout – against Greg Whitaker. The two frames went down to black and pink, so it was a very close match with plenty of potting and some fun safety exchanges.

Nevertheless, I shall contact the Handicap Committee to make some adjustments before the Winter Handicap Knockout is published. It runs from November to February, please let me know by email if you would like to be included at andrewthomasnowell@gmail.com

Meanwhile the current round of leagues are running with an impending deadline of 10th December. Please play all matches so that the resultant promotions and demotions are as fair as possible. A reminder that the winner of the most points in the top league over the course of the year will make it on to a new board. There are three rounds of leagues in total between September and June.

Andy Nowell, Snooker Chair

Alex Rose, Andy Nowell, Michael Lever and Scott Stanley with the EIC organiser, Bernard Stirzaker. Pradip Patel and Iain Welsh contributed to earlier rounds