

Autumn 2024 Materials List for Acrylic Painting

with Daisy Drummond on Thursdays.

General Materials

Sketchbook A4 or A3 size with charcoal or charcoal pencils, putty rubber and ordinary rubber.

Extenders: Golden is a good brand.

Used as name suggests for extending paint. It looks white but is transparent. Buy heavy body gel, medium gel and regular soft gel, the latter being more like a buttery consistency. It also can be used for gluing collage and altering sheen. You can buy in matt, gloss.

Glazing: Mix with paint (no white) to make transparent paints. Slows drying. Better than using just water colour washes but same principle. More medium the more transparent your colour becomes.

Retarder: slows drying time, add about 10 to 15%. Too much becomes goeey.

Varnishes: protects your work once finished. Buy it in gloss, satin or semi-gloss and matt finish.

Acrylic paints:

You will need a basic set. (Georgian Rowney's are good.) You can add additional colours as required.

NB: Pigments in tubes act closest to oil paints. They have heavy body. You can apply a lighter colour on top of a dark colour or mix them. You can add water to them without making them too viscose and work 'wet on wet'.

Pigments in bottles are slightly more fluid. They can have the same intensity of pigment, but they can also work like water colour with body.

Fluid colours: HI-FLOW come in bottles and are a newer version of acrylics. They are watery but retain strong colour or pigment. A useful fluid colour is Sepia. Buy one or two empty refillable container bottles with needle nose from hobby stores to apply very thin lines with intense pigment.

Important colours: Titanium White, Titan Buff, Zinc White, Lemon yellow, Cadmium Yellow, Yellow ochre, Burnt Sienna, Cerulean blue, Ultramarine blue, Burnt Umber, Cadmium red, alizarin red, raw umber, burnt umber, ivory black (if you can't get ivory then process black, Cadmium Orange, Manganese Violet.

Other colours to add - optional: cobalt blue (really nice), purple, greens, viridian green, mixing white.

Brushes: synthetic AND hog hair (the latter are better for holding paint) assorted sizes and shapes of filberts, flats and rounds. Make sure you have one small size round brush like a double zero for very fine work and pinpoint highlights,

I like this make (filberts)- and some Flats too in synthetic and I use a range from size 1 all the way up to Size 20 (COSTLY) you don't have to go as professional as that. Example

Palette – disposable or one with a cover that keeps acrylics wet.

Rags for working with and kitchen roll.
